MOUNTAIN MAJESTY

by Boone Speed

Mountain Majesty was shot in Yangshuo, China by frequent Flavor Paper collaborator, Boone Speed. Boone is a true adventurer and many of his images have a great story behind them; this one is no exception. Here is that story in his own words: “In 2009 my buddy Mike Call and I had the idea of taking a hot air balloon ride to capture the beauty of the area. Mike assured me that the balloon pilots understand the air currents and have the balloon completely under control. That was a lie. Once airborne, it turns out, the balloon’s flight pattern is completely random. During the flight, we came within inches of colliding with one of these karst limestone features, which would’ve been bad. Alas, we survived and did capture some epic imagery before crash landing in a cemetery.” The image is a non-repeating mural and is scaled and cropped based on the provided wall dimensions.
